He is also a Centennial Professor at the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, LSE. His work has focused on civil society, the non-profit sector, organisational studies and policy analysis, and comparative methodology. He is a founding editor of the Journal of Civil Society and author of over 250 publications in several languages. His present research examines the emergence of new organisational forms in global civil society, the role of foundations, and methodological aspects of social science research on globalisation.

Clifford Bob is associate professor of political science at Duquesne University. He is the author of The Marketing of Rebellion: Insurgents, Media, and International Activism (Cambridge University Press 2005), which won the 2007 International Studies Association Best Book Award. In addition, he has published in such journals as Foreign Policy, American Journal of International Law, Social Problems, and Mobilization, as well as in various edited volumes. Bob's research interests include human rights, social movements, and globalisation. He is currently working on three book projects: Globalizing the Right-Wing: Conservative Activism and World Politics; Blasphemy beyond Borders: The Globalization of Umbrage; and an edited volume, Rights on the Rise: The Struggle for New Human Rights.

Nick Couldry is Professor of Media and Communications at Goldsmiths, University of London and taught media, communications and culture at LSE between 2001 and 2006 where he directed a major ESRC-funded project on 'Media Consumption and the Future of Public Connection'. He is the author or editor of seven books including Listening Beyond the Echoes: Media, Ethics and Agency in an Uncertain World (Paradigm Books 2006), Media Consumption and Public Engagement: Beyond the Presumption of Attention (Palgrave 2007, with Sonia Livingstone and Tim Markham) and Contesting Media Power (Rowman and Littlefield 2003, co-edited with James Curran). He is Director of the recently formed Centre for the study of Global Media and Democracy at Goldsmiths.

James Deane is Head of Policy Development at the BBC World Service Trust. Formerly he was Managing Director of the Communication for Social Change Consortium, and before that Executive Director of the Panos Institute, in which role he established independent, regional Panos Institutes in Southern Africa, Eastern Africa and South Asia, and similar institutes in West Africa and the Caribbean. Deane has written widely on media, information and communication technologies, and other social communication issues. He was the organiser of the Global Media Forum at the Global Knowledge conference in Malaysia in 2000, the convenor of the Bellagio Symposium on Media, Freedom and Poverty, and the Bellagio Symposium on Communication and the Millennium Development Goals (both in 2004). He has provided formal strategic advice and consultancies to DFID, Sida, Norad, Danida, Swiss Development Cooperation, the World Bank, WHO, Unicef, Unesco, UNDP, UNAIDS, UNFPA, IFAD, FAO, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Stop TB Partnership.

Miguel Darcy de Oliveira is Special Advisor to former President Fernando Henrique Cardoso and Research Coordinator for the Project on Civil Society and Democracy at the Fernando Henrique Cardoso Institute in Brazil. A graduate of the Brazilian Diplomatic Academy and of the Geneva Institute of Advanced International Studies, he was exiled for his opposition to the military dictatorship in Brazil. Founder and former director of CIVICUS: the World Alliance for Citizen Participation, he is co-author of the CIVICUS report on the status of civil society, Citizens: building global civil society. De Oliveira is founder and director of the Brazilian NGOs IDAC, Comunidade Solidária and COMUNITAS, and co-chair of the Civil Society Working Groups in the Club de Madrid International Summit on Terrorism, Democracy and Security. He is also an NGO leader and civil society activist in the fields of democracy and citizen participation.

A former Fulbright Senior Scholar at the University of Nigeria-Nsukka, Ahmadu Bello University, and the University of Ibadan, he was Director of the Friends World Program West African Center in Kumasi, Ghana. With Onookome Okome he co-authored Cinema and Social Change in West Africa (Nigerian Film Corporation 1996) and edited Nigerian Video Films (Ohio University Press 2000). He has also written two books on English Renaissance literature. He has published numerous articles on Nigerian and Ghanaian video films; more are forthcoming in Africa Today, Film International, Postcolonial Text, the International Encyclopedia of Communication, and in African Cinemas edited by Josef Gugler.

Armine Ishkanian is a Lecturer in Social Policy at the Centre for Civil Society and a Research Associate at the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, LSE. Her research focuses on civil society, democracy building, gender and development. Her regional expertise is on the countries of the former Soviet Union with a particular focus on Armenia. Her forthcoming book, Democracy-building and Civil Society in post-Soviet Armenia (Routledge 2008) addresses the challenges of democracy building in Armenia and the broader post-Soviet region.

Mary Kaldor is Professor of Global Governance at LSE and Co-Director of the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, LSE. She has written widely on security issues and on democracy and civil society and is a founder and editor-in-chief of the Global Civil Society Yearbook series. Her recent books include Global Civil Society: An Answer to War (Polity Press 2003) and New and Old Wars: Organised Violence in a Global Era (1999). Most recently she co-edited A Human Security Doctrine for Europe: Project, Principles, Practicalities, with Marlies Glasius (Routledge 2005). Kaldor was a founder member of European Nuclear Disarmament (END), and founder and Co-Chair of the Helsinki Citizen's Assembly. She is Convenor of the Study Group on European Security Capabilities established at the request of Javier Solana.

Hagai Katz is Lecturer at the Department of Business Administration at the School of Management at Ben Gurion University of the Negev in Beersheba, Israel, Chief Research Officer at the Israeli Center for Third-sector Research, and a Research Associate at the UCLA Center for Civil Society. He has published extensively on the non-profit sector in Israel and on global civil society. Katz is editor of the Yearbook's Data Programme.

Thomas Keenan teaches literary theory, media studies and human rights at Bard College, where he directs the Human Rights Program. Among his publications are Fables of Responsibility: Aberrations and Predicaments in Ethics and Politics (Stanford University Press 1997) and an edited volume on media theory, with Wendy Chun, called New Media, Old Media (Routledge 2005). His current manuscript is called Live Feed: Crisis, Intervention, Media, about the new media and contemporary conflicts. With Andras Riedlmayer, he started International Justice Watch (JUSTWATCH-L), an Internet discussion list on war crimes and transitional justice. He has served on the boards of WITNESS and the Soros Documentary Fund.

Denisa Kostovicova is Lecturer in the Government Department/Development Studies Institute and a Research Associate at the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, LSE. Her present research interests include nationalism and democratisation in the global age, post-conflict reconstruction and security, civil society and state weakness, and European integration of the Western Balkans. She has also studied the role of education in identity formation and ethnic reconciliation in Serbia and Kosovo. Her publications include Kosovo: The Politics of Identity and Space (Routledge 2005), and 'Old and new insecurity in the Balkans: Learning from the EU's involvement in Macedonia' in A Human Security Doctrine for Europe: Project, Principles, Practicalities, edited by Kaldor and Glasius, (Routledge 2005). She also co-edited a special issue of Ethnopolitics, 'Transnationalism in the Balkans', with Vesna Bojicic-Dzelilovic.

Marcus Lam is a PhD student in the Department of Social Welfare at the UCLA School of Public Affairs and a graduate research assistant at the UCLA Center for Civil Society. He is editorial assistant for the Journal of Civil Society. In addition to diffusion models, his research interests include the regional non-profit sector in Los Angeles County, social enterprises, and organisational factors related to HIV testing. He holds a Masters in Public Policy from UCLA and a BA In Public Policy from Occidental College.

Victor Pickard is a doctoral candidate in the Institute of Communications Research at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He holds an MA in communications from the University of Washington where he wrote his Masters' thesis on and volunteered for the Seattle Independent Media Center. His research explores the intersections of media politics, communications policy, and democratic theory, and has been published in a number of academic journals, including: the Journal of Communication; Global Media and Communication; Media, Culture & Society; New Media and Society; Journal of Communication Inquiry; International Journal of Law and Policy; and Critical Studies in Media Communication. Currently he is writing a dissertation on the normative foundations of democratic communications policy.

Monroe E Price is Director of the Project for Global Communication Studies at the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania. Price, who was Dean of Cardozo from 1982 to 1991, graduated magna cum laude from Yale, where he was executive editor of the Yale Law Journal. He clerked for Associate Justice Potter Stewart of the US Supreme Court and was an assistant to Secretary of Labor W Willard Wirtz. He was founding director of the Program in Comparative Media Law and Policy at Wolfson College, Oxford, and a Member of the School of Social Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton. Price was a senior fellow of the Media Studies Center in spring 1998. He was deputy director of California Indian Legal Services, one of the founders of the Native American Rights Fund, and author of Law and the American Indian. Among his many books are a treatise on cable television, Media and Sovereignty, and Television, The Public Sphere and National Identity.

Vincent Price is the Steven H Chaffee Professor of Communication and Political Science at the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Pennsylvania. He was formerly chair of the Department of Communication Studies at the University of Michigan, where he also served as a Faculty Associate with the Center for Political Studies in the Institute for Social Research. Price earned his doctorate at Stanford University and has published extensively on mass communication and public opinion, social influence processes, and political communication. He served as editor-in-chief of Public Opinion Quarterly and on a number of journal editorial boards. His research on media framing of issues, the measurement of media exposure and political information, social identification processes, and third-person effects of mass communication is widely cited; and his book Public Opinion has been published in five languages and used in graduate and undergraduate courses throughout North and South America, Europe, and Asia. His most recent research, funded by grants from the National Science Foundation and the Pew Charitable Trusts, focuses on the role of political conversation, particularly web-based discussion, in shaping public opinion.

Sabine Selchow is a PhD candidate in the LSE Department of Government, under the supervision of Mary Kaldor and Ulrich Beck. In her thesis, Sabine takes a constructivist approach to 'the global' and explores the extent to which contemporary (national) policy decisions are 'global'. Sabine studied Development Studies at the LSE, and American literature and culture at Freie Universitaet Berlin, Germany and at Duke University, USA. She holds a Masters degree (M.A.) in North American Studies and Communication Studies from Freie Universitaet Berlin.

Jill Timms is a Research Assistant at the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, LSE. She coordinates the Chronology of the Global Civil Society Yearbook and is completing her doctorate research on corporate social responsibility at the Department of Sociology, LSE. Her research interests include corporate citizenship, anti-corporate groups, labour activism and social forums. Her publications include 'Trade Union Internationalism and a Global Civil Society in the Making', co-authored with Peter Waterman, in Global Civil Society 2004/5 (Sage 2005) and 'The Role of Social Forums in Global Civil Society: Radical Beacon or Strategic Infrastructure', co-authored with Marlies Glasius, in Global Civil Society 2005/6 (Sage 2006).
